Besides being one the best examples of Portuguese Late Gothic Manueline architecture, the Monastery is the home to the tomb of the infamous explorer, Vasco de Gama.

Time permitting, we see the Belém Tower, a small fortress island on the banks of the river and part of Lisbon's Old World defense system.

Sintra's mountains, forested terrain, proximity to the ocean and unique Moorish and Manueline style palaces define Sintra's breathtaking and one-of-a-kind landscape.

En route to Sintra, we visit the Queluz Palace. Often overlooked given its relatively small size, this 18th-century palace is one of the last great Late Baroque buildings designed in Europe, commonly referred to as the Portuguese Versailles. Wide corridors, impressive interiors and far less tourists make this palace an enjoyable first visit.

We continue to Pena Park, the grounds and gardens of the unmatched Pena Palace. This 19th-century Romanticist castle proudly stands alone as a National Monument and UNESCO World Heritage Site. Pena Palace's eclectic mix of architectural styles include Neo-Gothic, Neo-Manueline, Neo-Islamic and Neo-Renaissance, which all contribute to its whimsical and story-book feel. Steady walkers will have time to reach the Óbidos Castle. Legend has it that in 1148, Dom Afonso Henriques and his troops disguised themselves as cherry trees to capture this Castle from the Moors. Not so coincidentally, one of Portugal's famous exports, port wine, is named after the city. In 1703, the Methuen Treaty established trade between Portugal and England and the production of port wine gradually fell into the hands of British firms. Lunch in Coimbra at Fangas Maior.

Time permitting after lunch, we continue South towards Fátima. Once a sleepy town dedicated to the production of Olive Oil, today Fátima derives the bulk of its wealth and popularity due to religious pilgrimage.
